

PC nuts 'censor' English flag from art classic

MARY XMAS BUT WHERE'S ST GEORGE?

CROSSED OUT: The original work, right, and left, the new card

CAMPAIGNERS were fuming last night after the National Gallery "censored" the St George Cross from a painting.

The change to the classic 600-year-old Wilton Diptych picture was branded political correctness gone mad.

The original work shows Richard II being presented to the Virgin Mary and Child and 11 angels – one carrying a banner with the English cross. But the gallery has chopped the cross from the Christmas card version on sale in its gift shop.

Robin Tilbrook, of the English Democrats, said:

■ by ROSS KANIUK

"We are stunned that it is missing from the Christmas cards."

"In our view it's been cut out for reasons of political correctness and the desire not to promote anything English in case it causes offence."

Cropped

A spokesman for the National Gallery said: "The pennant was just cropped so that the card focused on the characters."

But Mr Tilbrook said: "We will be producing a card that won't be shaving the cross off. Our printers have had no difficulty keeping it on."

2 gays in every village

WALES has not one but two gays for every village, according to official figures.

They reveal that more than 30,000 Brits have tied the knot in gay weddings since the civil partnership law came into force last year.

Little Britain's outrageous Welsh telly character Dafydd, played by comic Matt Lucas, 32, claims he is the "only gay in the village".

But Wales has witnessed 537 ceremonies, more than enough for a couple in each of its 528 villages.

In the UK as a whole, around 1,500 gay couples a month are getting wed. Most of them are men.

A quarter of all civil partnerships have taken place in London, according to The Office of National Statistics.

A NEW KIND OF LIFE INSURANCE FROM JUST £4 A MONTH

Bringing up a family can be expensive. But if you died, who would find the money to help look after your children properly? If you don't know, then our new Family Life Insurance Plan could be ideal for you.

- Cover starts from just £4 a month
- Cash paid every month until your youngest child turns 21
- Guaranteed acceptance if you're aged between 18 and 45, and are expecting a child or have a child under 15

Depending on how much you pay, your family could receive up to £1,000 every month if you die during the plan. There are certain exclusions during the first five years of your cover, which may mean that the monthly benefit will not be paid. We'll tell you about these when you contact us.

Our minimum premium of £4 a month is based on a non-smoking female aged between 18 and 30, and would provide £250 of cover every month. Naturally, your own premium will depend on your age, individual circumstances and the level of cover you choose.

Applying is quick and easy, and will only take a few moments. So for more information and your immediate personalised quote:

VOICE OF AN ANGEL

HAS-BIN:
Pile of bags
at the house

Lotta aggro for a star in double trouble

OLDIE: Star's car disc

POSH neighbours reckon singer Charlotte Church's latest release is a load of rubbish.

The star enraged people living near her luxury home by leaving out a huge pile of bin-bags on the wrong day.

"This is a nice area and you don't expect to see pavements overflowing with bin bags," said mum-of-one Emma James, 33, who lives near the star's £500,000 house in Llandaff, Cardiff.

"I'm disappointed and shocked at Charlotte."

Another neighbour added: "This makes the place look like a gipsy site." Bin-men refused to shift the pile of bags and Charlotte, 20, has been sent a letter from council chiefs warning her to put them out on the right day.

■ by SUE FOSTER

Neighbours also spotted another potential slip by Charlotte – the tax disc on her motor is out of date.

Move

Now the Voice Of An Angel star, left, and her boyfriend, rugby ace Gavin Henson, 24, plan to move and find a pad in the countryside.

Last night, a spokesman for the singer declined to comment.

HARD-FI have built their own studio ahead of recording the follow-up to No.1 album Stars Of CCTV. They used their own hands to expand their musical home – a former cab office. Rich Archer, 28, said: "There was a lot of blood, sweat and tears, but we're all very proud of it. We're starting recording the new album this week."

Noel's plucky mate

GUITAR hero Noel Gallagher is striking up an unlikely friendship with former Arctic Monkeys bassman Andy Nicholson. Statuesque plucker Andy, 21, was booted out of the record-breaking band over the summer after his relationship with the rest of the group broke down.

But Oasis legend Noel, 39, has taken him under his wing – and made reference to his pal at his Xfm-sponsored show at Manchester's Lowry theatre on Sunday.

Mono-browed Gallagher dedicated Oasis classic Talk Tonight to "my mate Andy who used to be bassist in the Arctic Monkeys".

Chris to play DJ

CHRIS Martin and a string of celebs take over Zane Lowe's Radio 1 show while he has a New Year holiday. Kaiser Chiefs lads Ricky Wilson and Nick Hodgson, both 28, take the mic first on January 2. They are followed by Editors and Mike Skinner, 27. Chris, 29, takes his turn on the 18th.

Wembley aces Muse

MUSE are the first band to announce a show at the new Wembley Stadium.

I'm thrilled the rockers, left, famed for their stunning live shows, have landed the honour on June 16.

Bon Jovi were meant to open the venue this year but a series of building cock-ups has seen the re-vamp take a heck of a lot longer than anticipated.

A very carefully worded press release sees Wembley Stadium's chief exec Michael Cunnah say: "We're thrilled top British rock band Muse are going to be one of the first music acts to play here."

That means someone else will officially open it then. I hope it's a home-grown British talent.

Now we'll rock you!

LILY

Allen, 21, made the shortlist to become a Sugababe. Which makes it more startling that she wants to beat them to a pulp. She tells Uncut magazine: "Everything about them makes me cringe. I'm not sure I'd like to take them on in a fight, though. There's three of them. If there was three of me, I'd beat them."

NME Awards bosses have pushed back their ceremony by a month after fearing this year's BRITs will blow them out of the water.

The music mag's bash has prided itself on being the destination of choice for troublemakers and hellraisers.

But BRITs bosses have promised that this year's ceremony will be a return to the mayhem and madness that have been absent from their most recent spectacles.

The bash will be broadcast live giving ample opportunity for prime-time hi-jinks and organisers have lured last year's NME Awards host Russell Brand, 31, to front the ceremony.

Size

The NME shindig has always taken place within a week of the BRITs at the beginning of February.

But next year it has been pushed back to the start of March.

My spy said: "Because there is so much going on in London during the first fortnight in February, NME top brass thought it best to reschedule the event."

"It's become a fixture in the rock 'n' roll calendar and has been growing in size. The powers-that-be concluded that moving it to later in the year would be wise." Meanwhile, the line-up for the Shockwaves NME Awards Show has also been announced.

The Holloways, The Spinto Band, Howling Bells, We Are Scientists, The Long Blondes and Maximo Park have all signed up for the month of music taking place across London venues, starting on February 12 at Koko.

AISLEYNE'S GOT THE MISTLETOE READY

Want a red hot SEXmas

By LINDA HARRISON

d up for ing to ining to toe. And our of saucy

choco-asked 1," the d giggle.
 : noth-better than having it licked off by a hungry man.

"When I'm with someone I love I need it all the time," she smirks. "Five times a night is normal as far as I'm concerned.

"Plus being double-jointed in my legs means I can do sexual positions other girls can't."

Blimey! Our Aisleyne's not backwards in coming forwards. In fact, she admits that sometimes she's a bit of a minx.

She's even had a fumble in a church too! "It felt very unholy," she recalls.

We're glad to see the London lass is living life to the full after finding fame in BB7. And the blistering blonde reckons Christmas is the perfect time of year to snare that bloke you've had your eye on.

Her top tips to score?

"Show as much flesh as you're comfortable with – it's all about feeling sexy," she says.

"Show your legs or your cleavage, but both is a bit much. Oh, and always add a bit of bling."

No wonder most blokes would walk over hot coals to find sexy Aisleyne in their stocking this Christmas.

So, dare we ask, has she got any festive party confessions?
 "I'm not really a one-night stand girl," she says.

"The best feeling is if you're out with your man and girls are flirting with him and blokes are flirting with you, but you know you're going home together. That sex is the best."

Aisleyne's male fans will be delighted to see that her amazing curves are in tip-top shape. And she says that's thanks to her life in the Channel 4 house.

"I put on weight around my tummy in the house, but I don't mind," she says.

"I don't want to be scrawny like
 Nicole Richie – I like Charlotte Church-type curves.

"And I won't have any more surgery. I only had the boob job for business reasons."

And from the look of our exclusive pictures, this girl really is the business!

MIKE WARD

WHAT'S HOT TO WATCH TODAY

IT'S amazing the sort of stuff they pamper you with if you go for a beauty treatment – lotions, creams, waxes, essential oils and, of course, human snot.

The last of those treatments, I should probably stress, isn't the norm, but a one-off example we hear about tonight in ITV1's CONFESSIONS: THE BEAUTY TRADE (10pm).

During the show – part of a series which finds various tradespeople admitting to instances when they've allowed their usual professional standards to slip – we hear from beautician Jo Bowler, recalling the time when her nose began to run while she was doing a client's facial. "I couldn't wipe it," Jo recalls – "and suddenly, plop! It dropped on her face (Jo means her mucus, not her nose). I just had to whisk it away and carry on massaging her. I never told her!"

Other alarming examples include the hairdresser who left a 16-year-old lad with a bald patch after his clippers slipped – then told him he'd developed alopecia.

Plus the beautician who re-used a foundation brush – admittedly only on his hated boss – after he'd employed it to remove the splattered remains of a dead pigeon from the sole of his shoe.

A beauty counter assistant also explains that his breed can be a hideously vengeful bunch if a customer upsets them.

"Nine times out of ten," he warns, "if you're rude to someone on the beauty counter you'll end up looking like Jodie Marsh."

ELSEWHERE tonight, the game could be up for Abra in HOLBY CITY (BBC1, 8pm, not in Scotland) when new consultant Dan keeps asking awkward questions about that dodgy kidney swap. You know, the one involving the pig offal.

And Mark has discovered that the simplest way to cope with Tricia's death is to get smashed out of his mind.

DAILY STAR TV GUIDE

MATT BAYLIS

...ON LAST NIGHT'S TV

I'M NOT sure what the penalty for being rude about Wendy Craig is - it may well be the last crime for which a person can still be hanged in the British Isles.

But her excuse for presenting the final instalment of DISAPPEARING BRITAIN (Five) was pretty flimsy.

When actress Sarah Lancashire talked about working-class seaside holidays, she drew on her background growing up in Oldham.

When 'Royle Family' star Ricky Tomlinson paid tribute to the coal industry, it was from his perspective as a former union activist.

Ms Craig's look at the British passion for tea-drinking, meanwhile, was '...personal because I've spent my whole life drinking tea'. On those grounds, they could equally have had the blokes who've been digging up the end of my road since last May - since they seem to be right up there with Wendy in the life-long tea-drinking stakes.

Culture

Setting aside the fact that the presenter had no particularly strong reason for presenting it, this actually served up an easy, but thoroughly refreshing look at a much-overlooked corner of our social history.

And in some ways, Wendy's task was the hardest - because tea drinking is so much a part of our culture that we're barely aware we do it. From the hilariously stilted Thirties commercials, instructing housewives in the finer points of tea-making, to the significance of tea-time in classic plays and films like 'Brief Encounter' and 'The Importance of Being Earnest', this programme - like a good cuppa - never disappointed.

Weirdly enough, it seems we might never have been tea-drinkers at all, if the bubonic plague hadn't made Londoners super-cautious about hygiene.

The humble cup of Rosie Lee became a popular drink, for the simple reason that it had to be made with boiling water, in which no nasty germs could survive.

Full to the brim with this sort of trivial, but tasty detail, without daff attempts at creating some drama, it was by far the best episode in the series.

Just Jane

JANE O'GORMAN SOLVES
YOUR PROBLEMS TODAY
... AND EVERY DAY

Trendy ex is so sad

MY ex-partner is making a complete fool of himself with a much younger woman.

The guy's running around town like a teenager in hoody tops and trainers.

He's driving a sports car and spending his nights in trendy clubs and wine bars.

Friends who have seen him out tell me he looks absolutely comical.

Not only has he dyed his hair, he's now got a lip-stud and has taken to fake spray-tans too.

Apparently, his girlfriend looks like a blow-up doll and there's a strong rumour that she used to be an escort girl.

I'm so embarrassed. To think that this is the man I loved and cared for, for nearly six years – the man I was going to marry, who I had begged to father my children.

I don't know where to look.

JANE SAYS: What do you care what your ex is getting up to?

You're no longer with this guy. His behaviour is no concern of yours any more.

He can paint his face blue and run through the streets naked if he wants to.

Okay, you may still be embarrassed by him, but he's a free agent now – he can do what he likes.

I suggest that you get on with the business of living your own life and leave him to live his.

While you're still obsessing about his exploits, you're stopping yourself from moving on.

It's definitely time to let this fella go.

NYMPHO FRIEND'S RISKING HER LIFE

Best pal sleeps with strangers but won't insist on a condom

I FEAR my best friend is dicing with death – she's sleeping with almost every guy she meets and taking huge risks with her sexual health.

I know for a fact she never gets these strangers to wear condoms because she thinks it's "rude" to ask.

Can you believe that? She's having full sex with guys off the street and isn't insisting on any protection for herself!

She reckons she can tell by simply looking at a bloke whether he's "clean" or not.

But surely conditions like HIV, herpes and the clap don't show on the face.

I've known her for a very long time but find myself losing respect for her by the week.

A couple of weekends ago we both went to a party held by a fella we used to go to college with.

Lovers

While I was happy to chat to our mates, have a drink and a dance, she was on the prowl.

I watched her scanning the room for potential lovers and she disappeared after a while.

Our friend explained she was up in one of the bedrooms with two blokes from his work.

She came down about 30 minutes later looking extremely pleased with herself and then disappeared again with his brother.

On the way home she tried to give me all the gory details, but I told her I didn't want to know.

The thing is, between the ages of 16 and 20 she was normal. She was with her long-term boyfriend and behaved reasonably well.

But since he dumped her last year to go travelling, she's really lost the plot.

I suspect she's still angry with him and wants to make him jealous – but I fear she may pay for this behaviour with her life.

JANE SAYS: It almost sounds as if your sad friend has a death wish.

She's so angry with her ex that she's deliberately putting herself into dangerous situations with complete strangers.

Because she feels abandoned and crushed, she's lost all respect in herself and doesn't care what she does.

She's got to seek help because this can't go on.

As you so rightly point out, she could very easily pick up a sexually transmitted infection or even be attacked and raped by one of her mystery men.

This is not a game she's playing, this is serious.

Sexually transmitted infections are absolutely rife in this country and no one is immune.

Safer sex means always using a condom and only having sex with partners we know well and trust.

Just be honest and tell her how worried you are and that she could ruin her life for ever.

Beg her to visit her GP, who can organise some emotional support via therapy and a trip to her local GUM clinic for a check up.

I also suggest that you both have a look at the website www.playingsafely.co.uk for information on safer sex.

RISKY BUSINESS: Our reader's friend is sleeping around but not using protection

Afraid of my lesbo boss

I'VE just discovered my friendly female boss is a lesbian – and I suddenly feel uncomfortable around her.

I'm 21 and work in a busy office and have always been very close to her.

She took me under her wing from day one but now I don't know what to say or how to act.

Our relationship has changed and I'm terrified that she might try it on with me or fancy me too.

We used to have lunch together at least twice a week, but now I keep finding excuses to avoid her.

When I think about how we once shared a twin hotel room at a conference, it makes me shudder.

JANE SAYS: You're very narrow-minded and inflexible for such a young woman.

Stop being so self-obsessed and look at the bigger picture.

Your boss is clearly a very successful and professional woman.

I doubt for one minute she'd ever even dream of mixing business with pleasure.

She has as much right to enjoy a relationship as the next person.

So what if she is gay? What's that got to do with your working relationship?

You should be thankful for all the help and support she's given you so far and put your prejudices behind you.

My boyfriend's a thieving rat

I'VE just discovered my boyfriend has been dipping into my bag and using my bank card behind my back.

Before I found out, my bank rang and warned me that I was £2,000 overdrawn. I couldn't believe it.

My boyfriend muttered that my card must have been cloned so I said that I was going to the police – but he stopped me in my tracks.

Eventually he confessed that it was him – and then claimed that he was entitled to anything that was mine. Now he is threatening to dump me if I shop him.

JANE SAYS: The truth is that your boyfriend has stolen £2,000 from you. He has betrayed your trust and ripped you off.

If a mugger came up to you in the street and stole £2,000, then you'd go to the police, wouldn't you?

So why are you holding back now? This lover of yours is a thief.

He's using a combination of emotional blackmail and threats to keep you from reporting him – but you no longer owe him a thing.
